About Lady Lane Market

Lady Lane Market is London's first women-led market created to encourage more women, from all backgrounds, to trade on traditional street markets.

Lady Lane Market launched on 15th November 2019 and even featured on BBC London News. Usually selling a diverse range of goods on Wentworth Street, part of the iconic Petticoat Lane Markets, the market has been closed since March due to the pandemic. Our traders have still been working on their businesses in the lockdown whether starting a business from scratch, developing new products, creating new ranges, curating on social media, training and networking.

To mark the one-year anniversary, Lady Lane Market has created this small Christmas Catalogue where you can support local small businesses. Perfect Christmas gift ideas, unique and handmade crafts, skincare products, vintage items, home-made soaps, jewellery, books, flowers, greeting cards and a range of other gifts all made and curated by local women.

Until Lady Lane Market can open physically at the market again, do support online and sign up to find out about special events and the market reopening. You can also follow the ladies on social media. Please subscribe at www.ladylanemarket.co.uk/subscribe

Each page features a Lady Lane Trader where you can click on their links to make your gift purchases.
